African-American History Honors

The primary content emphasis for this course pertains to the study of the historical development of African-Americans by examining the political, economic, social, religious, military, and cultural events that affected the cultural group. Content will include but is not limited to, West African heritage, the Middle Passage and Triangular Trade, the African Diaspora, significant turning points and trends in the development of African-American culture and institutions, enslavement and emancipation, the Abolition, Black Nationalist, and Civil Rights movements, significant historical figures and events in African-American history, and contemporary African-American affairs to the present.

AICE Geography

This course encourages learners to understand contemporary geographic issues and the complexity of environmental systems around the world. Students will understand the main elements of physical geography and human geography and the interdependence between them to develop an awareness of the relevance of geography to understanding and solving contemporary environmental problems.
